SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Points Over Which People Who Patronize the Postoffice May Profitably Ponder.

Always write the addresses in the plainest possible manner, beginning as near the middle of the envelope as possible.

Don't lick the gum all off the stamp and then wonder why it doesn't stick.

Ordinary letters or circulars should have the stamp at the upper right-hand corner. This facilitates the process of canceling the stamps by machines, and will help to get the mail out on time.

Letters containing jewelry or other hard substances, should have the stamp on the upper left-hand corner, or be placed in a large envelope or box, the stamp on which must be canceled by hand.

Don't fail to write or print your name and address upon every piece of mail. In case of error in postage the article can be immediately returned for correction. Scores of newspapers are destroyed daily because of a lack of sufficient postage.

Second, third and fourth-class matter in one package subjects such package to the fourth-class rate—one cent per ounce.

The law requires full prepayment on all matter of the second, third or fourth-class, and such matter cannot be forwarded without additional postage every time it is ordered forwarded.

Domestic letters must have at least one full rate—two cents—before they can be forwarded. Postage due will be collected from the person addressed.

Don't try to save a few cents by sending valuables or money in an ordinary letter. Money orders and registry fees are low, and you run no risk.

Always insist upon your correspondent addressing you at your street number, box or general delivery. It will save time and annoyance to you.

Don't telephone the Postoffice and ask if there is any mail there for you ; it will be delivered on the first trip after arrival, and if addressed in care of General Delivery, you must call at the office for it.

Don't hold your mail until the closing of business, but mail it at frequent intervals during the day.

Letters addressed to you at "Terre Haute, Ind.," must be looked up in the Postoffice Directory. If there are others of your name you may never receive your letter.

Don't deposit valuable letters in street letter boxes ; better take them direct to the Postoffice.

A special delivery stamp, in addition to the regular postage, will secure the speedy delivery of any mailable package anywhere in the carrier limits.

Don't mail your letter in a street box after the last collection for the day and expect it to be delivered the next morning.

Because no mistakes were ever made in your mail in your native village is no reason why you should be just as "well known" in a big city.

Don't change your residence without immediately notifying
